From a peaceful vacation in Hawaii to a breathtaking adventure, two girls, Alyssa and Bianca, accidentally find a lost Tiki that has been sacred to the Hawaiians. It had vanished a long time back to the time of the connate Hawaiians. This 88 page book is the perfect book for kids ages 9 to 12. It would be probably the best to get this book from the library because it is so short.

The language was really descriptive, especially when Alyssa and Bianca were peeking into the window of the criminal's house when Ishi Takahara inside was trying to sell the tiki to Sebastian Picci. I conspicuously liked the part when Kaimi went surfing with Alyssa and Bianca. There were some parts of the book that I didn't like. Not a lot of parts, but some. There where some parts in this book that they immediately knew how to solve the problem. For example on page 48. There is one thing that I really didn't like about book wasn't about the passage, but about how long the book was. I thought it was too short. I would have probably liked it better if there where more breathtaking events (not that there aren't any). This has been a great book to read.
